

Behaviour for Learning: Sanctions process

Where a pupil's behaviour falls below the expectations, sanctions will be put in place to help that pupil learn from their mistakes. If unacceptable behaviour is repeated the sanctions will gradually increase, which is called a graduated response, to ensure there is a sustained improvement.

Low level behaviours

Behaviour points can be accumulated during the day, with some adaptations made for our young carers and SEND pupils which would be communicated with staff when required, before the relevant sanction(s) are issued.

Truancy

This will be dealt with through a different sanctioning system, with truancy from form and lessons both treated at the same level.

The only exception, to above, is truancy from school.

Below is an outline of the process to be followed, if truancy occurs.
